Investment Objective

To seek long term capital appreciation by investing in a diversified portfolio of European focused hedge funds. The Fund's methodology is geared towards achieving superior risk adjusted returns, as measured by Sharpe Ratio, when compared to European equity markets. Risk is reduced through limiting net equity exposure, hedging currency risk and through diversification of strategy and style.

Monthly Commentary

European Absolute was slightly down in April. Equity hedge fund returns were mixed with no significant pattern across sub-sectors. Interestingly, the short book of many managers proved more difficult than the long side. A trait evident, certainly early in the month, was a higher dispersion in individual manager returns as gross exposures increased and stock dispersion rose. That said, the rise in volatility we have witnessed in the last few weeks is likely to lead, at least in the shorter term, to a reduction in gross exposures and an increase in stock correlation. For now we continue to have a struggle between strong corporate earnings providing support for rising equity markets and concerns over sovereign debt levels. We continue to believe the prospects for hedge fund returns remain bright and that the right course of action is to take risk at the individual manager level to exploit stock, sector and market opportunities that will continue to present themselves but importantly without taking large bets on market direction. Additionally, in an environment where the macro pictures remains so unclear, we believe it prudent to allocate to dynamic and nimble managers.
